Department of Education

Together, we can.

To Readers of this Document:

The Survey of Arts Program at South Carolina Colleges and Universities will serve to provide valuable information to students, parents, guidance counselors, administrators, and arts teachers interested in the study of the arts at post secondary institutions. It is planned that this document be updated periodically in order to give students a perspective of what programs are currently available.

Students and their parents are encouraged to visit these higher education programs to determine the best fit for their needs. Students should tour facilities and ask a lot of questions so that the best decision regarding their futures can be made. This guide is also useful to teachers and other professionals who are interested in further graduate studies. Often teachers are interested in add-on certificates for which this information is useful.

The categories in this survey include institutional contact, undergraduate and graduates majors and degrees offered, enrollments, facilities, tuition costs, and scholarship opportunities. Users will want to cross reference this information.

The South Carolina Department of Education would like to thank the South Carolina Art Education Association and Dr. Karen Heid, University of South Carolina Assistant Professor, for their leadership in gathering and organizing this survey. Formally, the SCAEA published this guide for visual arts programs. Now the guide includes all degrees programs across the arts discipline (dance, media arts, music, theatre, and visual arts) in the areas of performance/production, history, and education.

We wish you the best as you set a path on which to continue your education in the arts. This guide will allow you the chance to compare college and university programs to best align with your individual preferences.

Sincerely,

R. Scott Hockman
Education Associate for the Visual and Performing Arts

Prospective Related Arts Majors

If you have picked up this book, you may be thinking about majoring in one of the many arts related majors South Carolina Colleges and Universities has to offer. Within these pages you will find some comparative data that may influence how you choose the college or university that you attend.

We encourage you to carefully peruse these pages, check out websites, and visit your top personal college choices. Each program varies according to studies, professors, costs, requirements, and hours.

As you look through these pages you will notice that not all the colleges and universities that have art programs are listed here. Some institutions chose not to be included within these pages and some did not submit information. Many colleges are in transition and do not have personnel to enter the data that was requested. This does not mean that the these colleges would not be worth exploring. Most pertinent information can be found on college websites. Check out the table of all the colleges in South Carolina that have arts programs for more information.

Guidance Counselors

This book has been created in order to give prospective college freshmen the information necessary to make informed choices for studying in the various related art fields. The information contained within will change from year to year and the most accurate information should be gathered from the school itself.

We hope that the book is beneficial to you and your school. Please let us know how we might improve the book in the future. Please refer to the front leaf for contact information.

Ten Lessons the Arts Teach

By Elliot Eisner

The arts teach children to make good judgments about qualitative relationships. Unlike much of the curriculum in which correct answers and rules prevail, in the arts, it is judgment rather than rules that prevail.

The arts teach children that problems can have more than one solution and that questions can have more than one answer.

The arts celebrate multiple perspectives. One of their large lessons is that there are many ways to see and interpret the world.

The arts teach children that in complex forms of problem solving purposes are seldom fixed, but change with circumstance and opportunity. Learning in the arts requires the ability and a willingness to surrender to the unanticipated possibilities of the work as it unfolds.

The arts make vivid the fact that neither words in their literal form nor number exhaust what we can know. The limits of our language do not define the limits of our cognition.

The arts teach students that small differences can have large effects.
The arts traffic in subtleties.

The arts teach students to think through and within a material.
All art forms employ some means through which images become real.

The arts help children learn to say what cannot be said.
When children are invited to disclose what a work of art helps them feel, they must reach into their poetic capacities to find the words that will do the job.

The arts enable us to have experience we can have from no other source and through such experience to discover the range and variety of what we are capable of feeling.

The arts' position in the school curriculum symbolizes to the young what adults believe is important.

Art Disciplines

Studio Art - Students pursuing degrees in studio art have many options once they graduate, but most seek careers as professional artists or designers. The Bachelor of Arts (BA) degree provides a well-rounded liberal arts education along with an art major. The Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA) degree in studio art is geared toward students serious about becoming professional artists or pursuing graduate-level study. Areas of concentration could be as follows:

Printmaking - is the art form of a printmaker. A printmaker is an artist who designs and makes prints. Several kinds of prints may be produced as a printmaker. Students may concentrate their studies on lithography, etching (Intaglio), wood cut, linoleum, and screen printing. Printmakers may be studio artists or enter professional printmaking

Graphic Design - is the process of communicating visually using text and images. Students of graphic design learn to present information through designing print or computer communications. Graphic designers not only learn visual design skills in the process of designing but also learn the process by which designs are generated.

Painting - is the fine art process of applying paint to a surface. Painting majors learn the art of oil, acrylic, watercolor, or other pigment application. Painting is a fine art that combines with drawing and composition, and other aesthetic considerations in order to manifest the expressive and conceptual intention of the practitioner.

Drawing - is a fine art process that utilizes any number of drawing instruments to make mark. Drawing instruments include graphite pencils, pen and ink, inked brushes, colored pencils, crayons, charcoals, pastels, markers, stylus, or various metals such as silverpoint Sculpture - is a three dimensional artwork. Sculpture is made from a wide variety of material. Some sculpture processes consist of woodworking, metal pouring, welding, stone carving, and found object manipulation. A person who creates sculpture is called a sculptor.

Ceramics - is artwork made out of clay bodies and fired into the hardened ceramic form. Some ceramic pieces are classified as fine art, while many others can be classified as one of the decorative, industrial or applied arts. Ceramic art can be either manufactured by individuals or in a factory that employs artists to design, produce or decorate the ware.

Photography - is the process of recording pictures by means of capturing light on a light-sensitive medium, such as a film or electronic sensor. Photography is an art form that explores avenues other than a photo-mechanical representation of reality.

Jewelry - A jewelry designer is defined as a person who renders, creates, and models original jewelry creations. By profession this person would be trained in the knowledge of metal-smithing and design. Today's jewelry designers are often professionals with knowledge of Gemology, Metalsmithing and Rendering in order to cater to large volumes of consumers as well as private clients. These designs can be initially created in a special jewelers model wax or even in metal (silver) in order to create a mold where an unlimited number of these same pieces can be cast in gold, silver or platinum.

Fiber Arts - is a style of fine art which uses textiles such as fabric, yarn, and natural and synthetic fibers. It focuses on the materials and on the manual labour involved as part of its significance.

Art Education - Students pursuing art education degrees typically become teachers in K-12 schools or professors at universities, but some go into museum education or art-based therapy. Art education programs are meant to help students understand how to teach, why they teach, the role of art in society, formulate and defend a philosophy of art, and become sophisticated consumers of art. Since a broad knowledge of art is required of art educators, students are exposed to many hours of studio art, art history, aesthetics, and criticism.

Media Arts - Artworks created with media technologies is called media arts. Media art includes making movies, digital art, computer graphics, graphics, computer animation, virtual art, interactive technologies, Internet art, etc. The term differentiates itself by its resulting cultural objects, which can be seen in opposition to those deriving from old media arts (i.e. traditional painting sculpture, etc.) This concern with medium is a key feature of much contemporary art. Students can also specialize in other areas in media arts such as Audio, Film, Script Writing, Video, and critical theories.

Art History - Art history majors generally pursue careers in gallery or museum administration, teaching, or working within historical organizations. Art history gives students a broad knowledge of cultures that generate the arts. Students develop skills in theory, research, analysis, and criticism.
